A. Introduction

MPH in Nutrition is an intensive two-year course designed to provide an excellent grounding in Public Health Nutrition to strengthen each learner's knowledge and skills contributing to the development of a cadre of public health nutrition professionals. It has been designed with an inherent recognition that individuals admitted to this program have prior and current experience in the health and nutrition sectors. The program is divided into classroom-based course work and field-based practical experience in Public Health Nutrition. The exit competency of the program allows the individuals to demonstrate their proficiency and mastery of the program competencies in the real-world application in the form of a facility and community based project. The project assignment is to be undertaken as a core part of the course curriculum.

The course provides systematic coverage of major topics in the area of Public Health Nutrition based on international standards. It is appropriate for health science and nutrition science graduates who want to pursue a career in the area of Public Health Nutrition. The course is designed based on latest international evidence and standards in Public Health Nutrition.

The course curriculum is designed with technical support from UNICEF, and experts in Public Health Nutrition belonging to academia and medical education.

B. Program Rationale

Public Health Nutrition is a core pillar of human rights and development and concrete, large-scale programming not only can reduce the burden of under nutrition and deprivation in countries but also can advance the progress of Nations. The national level data in India (NFHS-3 2005-2006) indicates that among children under-five, 20 per cent (25 million) suffer from wasting due to acute under nutrition; 43 per cent (55 million) are underweight and 48 per cent (61 million) children are stunted due to chronic under nutrition.

Under nutrition jeopardizes children's survival, health, growth and development, and it slows national progress towards development goals. Under nutrition is often an invisible problem. There is a critical window of opportunity to prevent under nutrition by taking care of the nutrition of children in the first two years of life, girls during adolescence, and mothers during pregnancy and lactation – when proven Public Health Nutrition interventions offer children the best chance to survive and reach optimal growth and development.

In light of the above context, the policymakers, program planners and national and international experts are concerned about the health and nutritional status of women and children in the country, and its impact on the country's economic progress. This has resulted in the design and implementation of national flagship programs such as the National Rural Health Mission (NRHM), restructuring and universalization of the Integrated Child Development Services (ICDS) with quality, special plans to address health and nutrition issues in the most vulnerable populations in rural, tribal and urban areas. The scenario calls for a large number of skilled professionals trained both in Public Health and Nutrition to contribute to improved planning and implementation of the national flagship programs.

Until recently most health and nutrition professionals have been contributing independently with limited impact on addressing critical issues related to maternal-child health and nutrition, and other public health problems at scale. It was increasingly felt that there was a strong need to develop a comprehensive approach to build capacities of professionals in Public Health Nutrition. Therefore, there is a need to offer a master's program - MPH Nutrition.

C. Overall goal:

To provide health and nutrition practitioners/professionals with a broad background and training in Public Health Nutrition, and prepare them for career opportunities in a public health nutrition setting.
